More Than Mobility is a leading UK supplier of Rise and Recline Chairs

Electric rise and recline chairs are ideal purchases for people who suffer from mobility issues as they allow the user to get in and out of the chair with ease.

We are all aware that as we age, our mobility can become more limited and simple things that we used to do easily can become so painful and uncomfortable. Therefore if you suffer from mobility problems such as arthritis, asthma, circulation problems, back pain, post op knee or hip replacement and have difficulty getting in and out of your chair, one of our rise and recline chairs may help.

These rise and recline chairs will help you get in and out of your chair, with much more poise and ease, unaided. The benefits may be astounding including allowing you to get up and down easily even if you have problems with your knees or legs and cannot bear enough weight on your knees to sit or stand without pain or discomfort. For people who spend a lot of time in an armchair the additional seating positions that our rise and recline chairs provide, can reduce the risk of pressure sores and other conditions.

Rise and Recline chairs are simple to use and are operated by a handset. Just a touch of a button lifts or lowers the chair to your preferred position giving you as much comfort as you want. The handset is attached to the chair so that it cannot be mislaid and is always at hand when required.

There are two types of rise and recline chairs available, those with a single motor and those with a dual motor system. A single motor rise and recline chair controls the backrest and foot plate at the same time, while a dual motor rise and recline chair allows you to operate both sections of the chair individually. Chairs with a dual motor system are usually more expensive, but offer more positions so that you can find your ideal seating position. Depending on your needs, the legs or back may need to be at a certain position, which a single motor chair might not provide.

Modern rise and recline lift chairs are very reliable and most models even come with a battery back-up feature so that the user is not stuck in the event of a power cut. The battery will power the chair for two or three lifts only, but will ensure that the user is not left sitting in the incorrect position, and is not stranded. Safety is also very important, so particular attention needs to be paid so that children and others do not play with or around the rise and recline chair.

The different types of rise and recline chairs offer different levels of support and comfort. As well as the level of comfort and support offered, your size should also be taken into consideration. Rise and Recline Chairs are available in different sizes to suit individual physiques. A chair for a petite person will not offer the right levels of support and comfort for a very tall person, and vice versa. The backrest and footrest complement it all.

Other Points To Consider When Choosing Your Rise And Recline Chair:

- Check the maximum recommended weight limit
- Establish where your electric rise and recline chair will plug into the mains to avoid obstructing walkways, or trailing wires.
- Remember rise and recline chairs will need more space when extended.
- Ensure entry point access to your property is adequate by referring to measurements before purchasing. Remember that the boxes will be bigger than the chairs themselves.
- Make sure the internal dimensions of the chair e.g. seat height, width and depth match the size of the user to ensure adequate support and comfort.

- ➔ Seat Height can determine how easy it is to get in and out of the chair. The correct seat height can be calculated by measuring the distance from the floor to the crease at the back of the knees. When seated the hips and knees should be at right angles whilst your feet are flat on the floor.
- ➔ Seat Width should be wide enough to allow you to sit comfortably whilst reading but narrow enough to enable you to make use of the armrests. Ideally it should be the width of your hips plus a clenched fist on either side.
- ➔ Seat Depth needs to be deep enough to support the full length of the thighs. When seated you should be able to place two fingers together between the edge of the seat and the back of the knee.
